Undergraduate field visits

Field visits for undergraduate medical students enrich their learning by complementary visual experience and enable reflection. As a part of this exercise, visits to Anganwadi had been undertaken with prior theoretical background about the services in the programme. On the day of visit, with vehicular support, 15 students were taken to Anganwadi along with our postgraduate students and MSW. At the centre, students were introduced to Anganwadi worker who briefed them about nutrition services to young children, pregnant women and lactating mothers. Students were demonstrated weighing of children by Salter's scale and concurrently they themselves performed weight measurements. The measurements were recorded on the growth charts and another copy of it was saved by the students. The supplementary nutrition activity through dry ration distribution and record maintenance of the same was shown. In terms who noted the dry food rations assessed its quality and emphasized the importance of nutrition to children. This in turn served as a demonstration of the expected learnings for the students. Students were made corroborate the theory with actual delivery of services. At the end students were sought to reflect upon the visit and enhance learning experience.
