Department of Periodontology

Enrichment course-

Title: Periodontal Medicine (Diabetics and periodontitis) – Inner View

Objective:

To give the participants a complete insight into inter relationship between diabetics and periodontitis.

Course content:

1. Introduction to concept of periodontal medicine. (Inter relationship between periodontitis and diabetics)
2. Discussion with the participants based on the cases reporting to the department.

Teaching aids:

1. Power point presentation.
2. Charts.

Audience:

Final BDS students 5 members can enroll at a time.

Course is conducted every month on fourth wednesday.

Resource persons:

Dr. Santhosh Kumar R will give the lecture.

Dr. Shruthi S will be assisting in the case discussion.

Method of content delivery:

1. The course will be conducted for small batch of 5 interns.
2. A power point lecture will precede the case discussion.
3. A case will be given with a detailed history for diagnosis.

Discussion:

The course is designed to enrich the knowledge of the participants regarding perio systemic link (Periodontal medicine). To review their understanding on the subject the cases reporting to the department will be given to the participants who will have to check the patient clinically and take a thorough history and come to a diagnosis. And also to justify if there is a perio systemic link in the given case and why?

At the end of the module the participants are expected to have a knowledge about the possible systemic condition which could be a cause for the aggravation of periodontal disease and its management.

DEPARTMENT OF ORAL PATHOLOGY & MICROBIOLOGY

ENRICHMENT COURSE

TITLE: HISTOPATHOLOGY LABORATORY TECHNIQUES

17/1/18

OBJECTIVES:

- To learn & prepare routine histopathology laboratory techniques
- To learn the procedure of processing the tissue
- To learn the procedure of sectioning technique
- To learn the procedure of H&E Staining
- Study stained slide under research microscope

SIGNIFICANCE:

- Learning about histological laboratory techniques will not only help in diagnosing the case but also students will get to know the tedious procedure which is carried out in routine histological laboratory and time frame required to arrive at final diagnosis.
- Histology is the study of the microscopic structures of cells and tissues. It is often carried out by examining a thin slice (called a "section") of tissue under a light microscope or an electron microscope. It helps students gain a better understanding of cell behaviour and more understandable. Histology enables students to predict and understand behaviour and function and arrive at correct diagnosis for treatment aspect.

CONTENT:

Introduction:

In order to study tissues with a microscope they must be preserved (fixed) and cut into sections thin enough to be translucent. Following fixation, blocks of tissue must be cut into thin sections. Following which the tissue is processed using various chemical like dehydration in alcohols and infiltration with paraffin, and embedding done. 5 microns in thickness of tissue sections are cut using microtome. Staining of histological sections allows observation of features otherwise not distinguishable. For routine histological work, it is customary to use two dyes, one that stains certain components a bright color and the other, called the counterstain that stains other cellular structures a contrasting color. Routine hematoxylin & eosin is stained. Hematoxylin stains negatively charged structures, such as DNA, a blue color. Eosin imparts a pink color to most of the other cell components.
